London, Oct. 27.—With battle of the Yser canal in the hands of the north being fought on land, sea Germans. Possession of the canal and air, experts believe the struggle for mastery of the French and Belgian coasts has reached its crucial stage. Though Nieuport is still in the hands of the Allies, the bodies in the canal, while the fact that the Germans have brought up heavy guns and driven off the dead. Saturday night was hell allied fleet, may cause the French from dusk to dawn. It is estimated English forces to fall back to the Germans lost 15,000 in the southward, leaving Nieuport and fighting along the canal.

GOVERNMENT CONTROL OF RAILROAD IS ADVOCATED

Chicago, Oct. 27.—Government control of railroads with zone managers similar to regional parks and combination of lines and equipment for the sake of eliminating expensive and needless competition was urged in an interview by President Ripley, of the Santa Fe system.

Mr. Ripley's views are so revolutionary he admitted he did not know how they would be accepted by his own board of directors, but declared them the only salvation for the railroads except government ownership.

BOLL WEEVIL ARTICLE FROM WEST ALABAMA

Repton, Ala., Oct. 26, 1914.
Editor Eagle:

This is perhaps no opportune time to be writing pessimistic articles, but we think that fair warning is appropriate at any time when danger is imminent. So we now propose to tell the farmers and business men of that section something of the boll weevil and his work as seen heretofore.

The weevil itself is spoken of in three stages of development. The eggs are deposited in the cotton top squares and young bolls. Very soon a tiny white worm about one-eighth of an inch appears. To look at it you would never think that it would be anything else but a worm.

But by close inspection in a little later stage you will observe that the insect has his head slightly tucked down under him, an evidence of inclemency, but not of the slightest laziness in this instance.

From the very point of his head extending to the other end of his body on the under side, right soon begins to develop a long needle-like bill and as it develops it is gradually separated from the body. While the bill is developing signs of flight wings appear. This is the second stage of development. In a very short time after this stage he develops into a full shaped boll weevil which would remind one of an ordinary corn weevil in some respects, except that his bill is so long that it has the appearance of a short bristle. And bristle it is, for with that little instrument more bales of cotton have been lost in West and Southwest Alabama this season than many mighty trains could carry.

As soon as they are old enough to fly, which is only a few days at most, they begin to pierce the young squares and tender bolls if there happens to be any bolls left. The buds of the square not larger than the end of your little finger are well fertilized and nicely cultivated pierce from three to a dozen times. That seals the doom of the squares. They can no more bloom afterwards than a knot on a log could.

I have examined hundreds of them and been in fields where the cotton would average over wab high and perfectly green and flourishing where for acre after acre not a bloom could be seen. As an example of some of their destruction I present the names of a few planters, and what the weevils have done for them here.

M. D. McMillon is not expecting to get a total of ten pounds off of where baled at all, but thousand of one stalks without a bale. All

Joe Hall has 15 acres, shoulder high, won't get 5 bales. It is extra good land and he has in previous years been getting a bale to the acre.

Here is the record. There were only three or four bales to the stalk where baled at all, but thousand of one stalks without a bale. All the bales were at the very bottom of the stalks and above them not a single bale that would come to maturity and open.

The cotton was green and flourishing and for cotton of that kind should have been full of bloom, but listen, after walking over the larger part of the field only one bloom was seen. We found from one to three weevils in a bloom but not in every bloom. In that field of 20 acres they are looking for 4 bales of cotton, I believe that they will do well to get 2 bales. We said to the old negro woman living at the edge of the field that there appeared to be some Fletcher Hobbs has nine acres that will not make over two bales that should have been full of bloom, all told. He has before now been getting from half to three fourths of a bale to the acre. It was planted about the usual time and cultivated to defeat the weevil if possible.

Capt. Merritt has eighteen acres

MOTOR DOME RIDERS IN GREAT STUNT

Many interesting attractions at the Fair Grounds—Enough variety to suit everybody.

Offering a great variety of entertainment, the first annual exhibition of the Southeast Alabama Fair Association is in full sway with good programs each afternoon and night.

The feature attraction is the Motor dome, Riders, one of the most daredevil stunts and the first of its kind to be seen in Dothan. The motorecyclists ride in a horizontal position around a circular perpendicular wall. The momentum of the machines keep them sticking to the wall. The feat is based upon the same principle as swinging a bucket of water over one's head without spilling the water. Hartley and Chandle, of Sheeley's Greater Petrograd, Oct. 27.—Defeat of Germans in their flanking movement north of Warsaw is announced in an official report today. It states that the Germans have retreated toward Thorn, their base in East Prussia.

Zeppelin Airships Bombard Warsaw

Berlin, Oct. 27.—Fighting is in progress about the walls of Warsaw and Zeppelin airships are bombarding the city. The great French fortress of Verdun has been isolated and relief cut off. Germans also crossed the Yser river and captured Lille, have repulsed fierce counter attacks by the Allies and made some progress.

Those are the outstanding features of the summary of operations given the International News Service by the war office today. It was added that operations about Warsaw are highly successful and Germans have inflicted heavy losses upon Russian defenders.

Sheeley's motorcycle experts will take part in the motorcycle races upon the race track for professionals, Hartley and Chandle having won yesterday afternoon over Ogles tree, of Troy, the purse being $20. Sam Brown, of Montgomery, who holds the championship at the Montgomery and Mobile race tracks, was eliminated from the races yesterday on account of being thrown from his machine. He started off with his machine wide open, and probably struck a pebble, which caused the machine to skid. Brown turned possibly three or four somersaults in the air, and hit the dust.

Four killed when dry kiln collapses at Samson today.

A few minutes before 6 o'clock this morning the dry kiln of the Alabama Mill & Land Company here collapsed, burying five men in the debris. Four were dead when taken out, while the fifth, William Brown, was rescued from beneath a pile of brick and timber remains unharmed and not seriously hurt, having broken his arm. About seven or eight other men had narrow escapes, among them being hit with red hot bars as they jumped for safety.

The known dead are: J. A. McRae, foreman, aged 46, his wife and six children; Marion P. Brown, 14; Ed Franklin, 16, his wife and widow and one child; Alie Brown.

All are white men. At about 5:30 minutes about twenty men were working in the kiln, and would have been in the kiln at 5:15 a.m. The kiln was probably three or four stories high.

THE FACE ON THE DOLLAR.

Memphis Commercial Appeal

The next time you get a silver dollar in your hand, burnish it up a bit and take a good look at the face of the goddess stamped upon it. Did you ever see finer features, a loft for expression, a countenance more suggestive of the peace and calm and benevolence of life?

Is it not a face to suggest honesty and to inspire confidence? Would you not go to a woman with such countenance, sure of sympathy and consolation?

It is not a fancy sketch, this beautiful and benign face, it is a portrait from life, and reproduced features of a warm, pulsing, radiant girl, whose mother was a well-known southern beauty.

The story runs like this: Anna Willis was the daughter of a wealthy southern slave owner and married Henry Williams, of Philadelphia, in the good old days before the war. Unfortunately for the young couple Dr. Willis, the girl's father, lost his fortune and could not "set them up" in the style to which she had been reared. This, however, did not interfere with the happiness of the two, who settled in Philadelphia and eventually reared a family of nine children. During these years Henry Williams made and lost a fortune, so that his wife, at his death, found herself plunged again into poverty.

The last child, named Anna Willis Williams, was born about the opening of the Civil War. What trials and privations the mother underwent to educate and provide for her fatherless child will never be known. But it is certain that Anna Willis, budding into exquisite womanhood, had none of the luxuries of life. So serene and beautiful was her face that every where she went people turned to look at her.

One day the head of the Treasury Department sent for a designer named George Morgan and committed him to design the stamps for the new silver dollar that was soon to be issued. The stamp for one dollar was quickly made, but Morgan waited long and diligently for a face fair enough to adorn the other side. One day a fellow artist introduced him to Anna Willis Williams and immediately he knew that his search was ended, for here was the exact type of face he wanted. Anna was persuaded to serve as his model, and so the girl who had never had an extra dollar in her life saw thousands of shining coins bearing her image.

ed palm, the third day slithered with blood in the criminal's grasp so it runs and re-runs the gamut of its changing existence, and wherever it goes it bears the pied face of the beautiful girl to whom it was once a stranger.

Romance is not a lost item nor an unknown quantity in this mad world. Look at the fact on the dollar in your purse and see if you think it is.

PEACE THE WORLD.

A strong article in the Progressive Farmer is written to show that if the war in Europe were to stop now that it would be impossible to expect the price of cotton to advance much, on account of the crippled condition it would have the foreign countries.

He calls attention to a two and a half million bale surplus which when added to this sixteen million bales now with only about five million bales used in the United States. He does not feel that we should produce but about three million bales in 1915, if we want a price for even next year's crop. So it would seem that cutting the crop fifty per cent wouldn't be enough. It is likely that a half crop wouldn't bring as much as 10 a pound.

Please are things that each farmer will have to work out for himself. It is next to impossible to get such a number of people to act in a cord. If a farmer doesn't know when his whipped and wants to keep producing cotton he can do that method, find out just how long cotton can go.

When the world get tired up it shuts off everything but the real stuff. People must eat. If they don't wear clothes and they will eat and the farmer who prepares to feed the world by growing what the world has to eat, is the man who is going to be on every acre another year, and still other years to follow.

While there are so many people in Europe engaged in destroying instead of producing, it stands to reason that the people who are but growing and producing what is to be actually consumed will get a good price for it.

So long have we made cotton that we have produced a race of people down in the cotton belt who believe they would perish to death if they didn't make cotton.

The United States is being called upon now to feed the world. It is something for man and beast to eat. They are not wrought up over where they can buy clothing.

A JUDICIAL TRAGEDY.

Emporia Gazette

The Roman general had the greater portion of the army encamped on the highland to the west of Masada, and set up his battering rams and towers on the narrow connecting neck of land. At this point he made a breach in Herod's wall and set fire to an inner wall of wood and stones which the Jews had hurriedly built, says the Christian Herald.

Here took place what was probably the most tragical ending to a stage ever recorded in the world's history. After the Romans had succeeded in taking the first wall and had burned the second they decided to storm the citadel next day. The Jews learned their lesson and to avoid being taken alive they agreed to kill themselves and their wives rather than surrender. They gathered up all their valuables in a heap and set them on fire, so that the enemy would find no spoils. Each then ran to his wife and children, and after tenderly embracing them, slow them down to death.

THE HEART'S FRIEND

Fair is the white star of twilight
And the sky clearer

At the day's end;
But she is fairer, and she is dearer

She, my heart's friend!

Far stars and fair in the skies bending.

Low stars of hearth fires and wood smoke ascending,

The meadow-lark's nested,

The night hawk is winging

Hence through the star shine the hunter comes slinging.

Pain is the white star of twilight,
And the moon roving

To the sky's end;

But she is fairer, better worth living

She, my heart's friend.

A SENSIBLE FASHION

A new decree of fashion which will it be considered the correct tosers if it is adopted is that in future it will be considered ultrafashionable to be prompt in filing all one's engagements. No longer will it be considered the correct thing to stroll in a little late for dinners and luncheons and card parties, with a plausible excuse ready for keeping one's hostess waiting.

No indeed; the maid or matron who arrives late will find that the pleasant function which she has been bidden has begun without her, the hostess having justly concluded that it is hardly fair to delay her other guests who have been courteous and considerate enough to be punctual, and keep them waiting on some one who is neither polite nor thoughtful.

If the fashion will only include dancing parties as well, it will be received with enthusiasm by the men as well as by the hostess. For the custom followed by the girls of the society set of not going to a party till close to midnight and remaining almost until daybreak, is hard on their escorts who have to be at their desks next morning before the girls are up.

It is to be hoped that the new sane fashion of punctuality will be accepted and followed everywhere, and a good time to begin is right now when reunion affairs call for a prompt attendance in order that none will be missed.—Exchange.
